

Course Rationale

Poor infant feeding practices are a major contributor to child mortality, morbidity, malnutrition and poor growth. The established global recommendations for infant feeding are exclusive breastfeeding for six months followed by complementary feeding and continued breastfeeding for two years or more. Few countries meet these targets, and in many places programmes to promote improved infant feeding are slowing down. Yet interventions to improve breastfeeding and complementary feeding have been shown to have the greatest potential to save child lives.

In 2005, a new Innocenti Declaration was adopted, 15 years after the original Declaration which led to the development of the Baby-Friendly Hospital Initiative. The 2005 Innocenti calls upon all Governments and other parties to take a number of actions, including revitalising the Baby-Friendly Hospital Initiative and ensuring that appropriate guidelines and skill acquisition regarding infant and young child feeding are included in both pre-service and in-service training of all health care staff, to enable them to implement infant and young child feeding policies and to provide a high standard of breastfeeding management and counselling to support to mothers and communities. Taking these actions requires resource people with leadership ability and sufficient knowledge and skill to educate and train others.

This two week evidence-based course is designed to equip participants for this task, and to give them a wider background than is possible with only short practical courses. Training of this kind has hitherto been available mainly in centres such as London, which is costly and difficult for many people to attend. For several years the Infant Feeding Consortium (IFC) has been receiving requests to conduct courses regionally, so that they are more widely available to a larger group of participants. WABA is now working with the IFC to make such a course available in South East Asia.

Course Programme

The course will include 12 days of teaching – from Monday 26th February to Saturday 10th March, with one rest day in the middle – Sunday 4th March. Participants should arrive by 3 pm on the afternoon of Sunday 25th February, to register, and for an Introductory Session and Welcome Reception. They should be prepared to stay until the late afternoon or evening of Saturday 10th March, or until the morning of Sunday 11th March. Certificates of Attendance will be presented on the afternoon of Saturday 10th. The course is residential and intensive. Participants are encouraged to attend full-time.

Teaching Methods

The teaching will include a number of Clinical Practice sessions, when participants will work in small groups with mothers and babies at the Penang General Hospital, to practice the skills that they learn in the classroom.

Classroom sessions will include lecture presentations, practical demonstrations and exercises, and seminar and group work. Participants will be asked to prepare privately and in groups for some sessions. Reference material and handouts will be provided variously in electronic or paper form.

Participatory training methods will provide some flexibility for Course Directors to respond to individual requirements.

Topics Covered

The main emphasis of the course will be on the management of breastfeeding, breastfeeding counselling and the baby-friendly hospital initiative. Related issues such as complementary feeding and HIV and infant feeding will also be included, and teaching throughout will reflect participants' needs to learn about advocacy and training methodology.

THE TOPICS COVERED WILL INCLUDE:

- Global policies related to infant and young child feeding and their rationale
- Evidence for the influence of breastfeeding on health and emotional development of infants, and mothers' health
- Physiology of lactation, suckling, and the secretion of breast milk
- Composition of breast milk, and the importance of colostrum
- Positioning and attachment of the infant at the breast
- Communication skills for working with mothers and babies
- Influence of obstetric practice on breastfeeding
- Initiation of breastfeeding – skin-to-skin contact
- Milk sufficiency – under- and over-supply
- Breast refusal and the reluctant breastfeeder
- Breast conditions (nipple form, sore nipples, engorgement, mastitis)
- Maternal health and nutrition, and maternal medication
- The nutritional adequacy of exclusive breastfeeding
- Breast milk expression and storage
- Relactation
- Developmental readiness for feeding
- Introduction of complementary foods
- Obstacles to exclusive breastfeeding
- Feeding of low birth weight babies
- Kangaroo mother care
- Baby-Friendly Hospital Initiative - implementing the 10 steps - New materials
- Baby-friendly practices beyond the hospital
- Community support for optimal infant feeding – mother and peer support
- HIV and infant feeding, and replacement feeding
- Women and work
- The International Code of Marketing of Breast-milk Substitutes
- Programmes and strategies to achieve optimal infant feeding
- Developing advocacy and training skills for resource persons.

Who Should Attend

The course is designed for doctors and other senior health professionals who are involved in national or local infant feeding programmes as clinicians, trainers, advisers, programme co-ordinators or advocates for optimal infant feeding. Teams from the same institution or locality are particularly welcome.

The course is conducted mainly in English, though there will also be some use of Malay, particularly for communication with mothers.

Course Costs

The cost of the two week course, including twin-sharing accommodation in a 4-star hotel with ensuite facilities and meals (excluding evening meals), and essential reference materials is US$ 2,450.00. This does not include the cost of travel to Penang.

WABA does not accept sponsorship of any kind from companies producing breastmilk substitutes, related equipment (including feeding bottles, teats and breastpumps) and complementary foods, and cannot accept applicants funded by such companies.
