

Weaver-Tremblay Award

In 1992 the Society for Applied Anthropology in Canada established the Weaver-Tremblay Award, naming it after Marc-Adéland Tremblay and Sally Weaver, two of Canada's most respected anthropologists. Both Weaver and Tremblay were instrumental in the founding of CASCA, an initiative prompted by a range of factors. But a central principle was their belief that anthropologists and their professional associations need to examine and address matters of social and political concern. The award was subsequently moved to CASCA's jurisdiction and has been presented to a series of distinguished colleagues during the past 15 years.

This year's winner of the Weaver-Tremblay Award in Applied Anthropology is

Dr. Penny Van Esterik of York University.

Her lecture will be entitled "Nurturing Anthropology".

A reception in honour of Dr. Van Esterik will follow the award presentation and lecture.
